Estranged for a Year.

CHARLESTON, S. C., July 4.—A most affecting scene was witnessed this morning in the reunion of, a father and son who had been estranged for a year by reason of the sottish tendencies of the latter having caused him to make an indecent exhibition of himself in the public street about a year ago. The father reused to speak to his son again so long as he touched liquorin any shape of tum or in even the slightest quantity. The situation was a hard one for both. The son wished to reform but could not. Having tried several so-called cures in as many sanitariums he at last went to the Point of Plues, near Boston, where his reformation was effected, and he now has not the slightest appelite for even the most seductive of alooh die beverages. The father being satished that the cure was certain to be permanent, received him at the station with open arms, and there were few dry eyes among those who were present.
